ABSTRACT:

A homoeopathic physician should be a keen observer in his daily practice. In order to find a similitum, we first take a detailed case history of our patient and prescribe medicine on the basis of individualization of the case. While doing so, we sometimes see that a symptom that could not be found under a particular medicine in any Materia medica and Repertory, gets cured after prescribing that particular remedy. This type of symptoms, when are repeatedly observed, can add to the literature of our Materia medica and help in our day to day practice. One such example has been put in this short discussion.
