ABSTRACT:

Carcinoma of the cervix is the most frequent of all genital tract cancers. In India, cervical cancer is the second most common gynaecological malignancy. Cervical cancer is cancer that begins in the cells of the cervix. The cervix is the lower end of the uterus. The cervix connects the uterus to the vagina. Cervical cancer develops slowly over time. Homoeopathic medicines can be useful in reducing the intensity of symptoms of carcinoma of cervix.

KEYWORDS: Cervical cancer, Haemorrhage, oral contraceptives
