ABSTRACT:

Infants are one of the most delicate, sensitive living beings who need care & attention. Every parent tries their best to keep their babies safe & free from disease. Still, in the present world with complex lifestyles, and ever-changing environmental conditions, it is challenging to keep even an infant away from behavioral disorders. Action regarded as acceptable or even praiseworthy by one set of parents may represent serious misconduct to another couple. Complaints of disordered behavior often reflect parental ignorance of the stages through which the child passes in the course of normal social, emotional & intellectual development, if time permits, The physician should emphasize the cause and mental symptoms. He should also consider the child's reaction in a routine environment, which may be valuable in aiding recovery. At the same time, there is awareness of the need for preventive medicine & of a positive attitude to health to oppose disease. Homeopathic remedies can deal with illness in its early stages & perhaps prevent the development of more serious diseases. Every patient has an individual problem with his personality & reaction. Therefore, the concept of remedies for individuals rather than for disease. In this study of behavior disorders in children, we treat them and provide better emotion. "Preventive" & "Constitutional" medicine forms the core of Homeopathic treatment. Early detection of behavioral abnormalities will help correction before they become difficult to treat and manage.
