Abstract:-

At present there are many theories and description about the origin of the universe and meaning of life. there are different statements regarding the cause and effect of creation and life. Religions and cultural traditions states that God is the creator and ruler, on the other hand Science deny the existence of God. A definite cause of creation has not been scientifically found yet. but, ancient Samkhya philosophy written in 500-800 BCE is the first one who explain the process of creation and origin and evolution of creation.

According to Samkhya two components which are eternal together form the creation i.e. Prakriti and Purusha. Prakriti combined with Purusha is the main cause of creation, this review article gives light on what is referred as Prakriti that is described in Samkhya philosophy.
